Evaluating Patient Treatment Options: How do we know what works best?

April 18, 2017

OPENING REMARKS BY

Jodi Segal, M.D., M.P.H.

Co-director, Center for Drug Safety and Effectiveness; Professor of Medicine, Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine

Dr. Jodi Segal is a professor of medicine at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. She has joint appointments in health policy and management, and epidemiology at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. Dr. Segal is internationally recognized as a clinician-investigator in comparative effectiveness research and pharmacoepidemiology.

She serves as the associate director of the Center for Health Services and Outcomes Research (CHSOR) and the co-director of the Center for Drug Safety and Effectiveness (CDSE), both in the School of Public Health. Additionally, she's the director of the Pharmacoepidemiology Program.

Her research interests include pharmacoepidemiology, comparative effectiveness research, and evidence-based medicine. Dr. Segal and her team have been tapped by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to conduct research to find out why physicians opt to prescribe costlier brand-name drugs when generic ones are available.
