Statement of Belief

For most of U.S. history, the political system has successfully embraced and managed differences in ways that have moved the country in new and promising directions. The most important moments and achievements in the nation’s history have been the result of negotiated understandings and balanced compromise.

Today, the nation is again faced with stark divisions. While finding solutions is never easy, the Bipartisan Policy Center believes the American answer will always rest in harnessing the best ideas from both parties, seizing pragmatic consensus, and holding steadfast to our commitment to sustaining the institutions and traditions that enable cohesion, freedom, and opportunity in a diverse nation.
