ROEL C. CAMPOS

Former Commissioner, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission

@RoelCCampos

Roel C. Campos is a partner at Hughes Hubbard & Reed in the firm's Washington, DC office and is Chair of the Securities Enforcement practice. Roel's practice consists of advising senior management and boards in their most sensitive and complex issues. His practice often involves conducting internal investigations and defending matters involving financial regulators, such as the SEC, DOJ, CFTC, and FINRA. He also advises boards on items such as cybersecurity, governance, cryptocurrency and proposed rulemakings by financial regulators.

He began his career after graduating from the US Air Force Academy and served as an officer for five years. After attending Harvard Law School, he worked in Los Angeles for major law firms as a corporate transactions/securities lawyer and litigator. He also served as a federal prosecutor in Los Angeles for five years.

Beginning in 2002, Roel was appointed twice by President George W. Bush and confirmed by the US Senate as a Commissioner of the SEC, serving until 2007. During his tenure, Roel presided over hundreds of complex enforcement cases and rulemakings involving the full range of federal securities laws. Prior to being appointed to the SEC, Roel raised venture capital with partners, was a senior executive and operated a radio broadcasting company.

DANIEL M. GALLAGHER

Former Commissioner, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission

@WilmerHale

Daniel M. Gallagher is a partner and Deputy Chair of the Securities Department at WilmerHale. He focuses on advising corporate boards and management on the full range of legal and strategic issues they face, representing issuers, and financial services firms and accounting firms in investigations and regulatory matters.

As an SEC commissioner from 2011 to 2015, Mr. Gallagher championed corporate governance reform, advocated for a comprehensive holistic review of equity market structural issues, and encouraged greatly improving the SEC's fixed income market expertise. Mr. Gallagher previously served as deputy director and co-acting director of the SEC's Division of Trading and Markets.

Gallagher has served the SEC in several capacities throughout his career. He first joined the SEC as an intern while pursuing his JD, working on enforcement matters. In 2006, he served as counsel to then SEC commissioner Paul Atkins and then later he served as counsel to SEC chair Christopher Cox. He worked on topics involving the Division of Enforcement and the division of Trading Markets. In 2008, Gallagher joined the Division of Trading and Markets as its Deputy Director and served as Co-Acting Director of the division from April 2009 to January 2010.
